What exactly is the

CORONAVIRUS

Coronavirus disease (COVID-19) is an infectious disease caused by a newly discovered coronavirus.

Most people infected with the COVID-19 virus will experience mild to moderate respiratory illness and recover without requiring special treatment. Older people, and those with underlying medical problems like cardiovascular disease, diabetes, chronic respiratory disease, and cancer are more likely to develop serious illness.

The best way to prevent and slow down transmission is be well informed about the COVID-19 virus, the disease it causes and how it spreads. Protect yourself and others from infection by washing your hands or using an alcohol based rub frequently and not touching your face. The COVID-19 virus spreads primarily through droplets of saliva or discharge from the nose when an infected person coughs or sneezes, so it's important that you also practice respiratory etiquette (for example, by coughing into a flexed elbow).

OUTBREAK?

The World Health Organization (WHO) announced a global 'megatrial,' called SOLIDARITY. The trial will discover if any of four existing drugs can treat the new coronavirus.

According to Science, the four drugs include:

remdesivir, an experimental antiviral compound
chloroquine and hydroxychloroquine, malaria medications
lopinavir and ritonavir, a combination of HIV drugs
lopinavir and ritonavir, plus interferon-beta, an immune system messenger that can cripple viruses.

Symptoms of COVID-19

People may experience:
cough
fever
tiredness
difficulty breathing (severe cases)
